

The Transition Quilt is a quilt made by four trans and disabled artists.

Those artists are Colin, E, Joe, and Al

Al and E first made the quilt when their friend Colin had top surgery.

Colin

Top surgery is an operation that some trans people might have on their chest.

Some trans people also choose to take hormones. Hormones are usually made in your body, but some trans people might choose to have different hormones to the one their body makes.

AI

Colin

Joe

When AI started taking hormones, Colin and their friend Joe added more things to the quilt and gave it back to AI.

Since then, the artists have all added to the quilt and given it back and forth to each other.

Some of the things on the quilt are very silly, like the T-Rex drinking tea.

Other parts make references to queer history, like the lavender and the pansy.

A few parts are very serious.
This patch says you are trans enough.

The quilt has new things added to it all the time.

Every time the quilt gets given to someone, a message is written on the back of the quilt.

Over all, the quilt is about themes like friendship, gender, and being cosy.

The quilt has been shown in a few exhibitions and some people have written about it.

The artists are all very proud of the quilt and always enjoy adding more things to it.

Transition Quilt was made by Colin Lievens, Eleanor Louise West, Al Hill, and Joe Lawn

Images from the artists, SHED Project, The Noun Project, and Canva

With thanks to Katie Luna Goldfinch